Program Eligibility

Definition:

An exclusion fence is a specialized, often permanent barrier designed to protect natural resources, crops, or livestock by controlling or preventing access by wildlife or domestic animals. These fences are frequently used in conservation efforts to exclude livestock from sensitive areas like streams, rivers, and riparian zones to improve water quality and land management.

Purpose:

Excludes livestock from woodlands and waters as a conservation practice to protect soils, prevent erosion and assist watershed protection in surrounding areas of the farm while also managing the livestock herd. Benefits to water and woodland exclusion are both agricultural and conservation conscious.
